Internet Addiction

What is Internet Addiction?

Internet addiction refers to patterns of use that may feel excessive or hard to control, and that can start to interfere with everyday routines, responsibilities, or emotional wellbeing. This may include social media, gaming, browsing, streaming, or online shopping.

You might notice

- Spending more time online than intended.
- Feeling restless, moody, or irritable when not online.
- Neglecting responsibilities, relationships, or sleep for screen time.
- Using the internet to escape problems or regulate emotions.
- Failed attempts to cut back on internet use.
- Losing track of time while browsing or gaming.

Type

Description

- | | |
|----------------------------|--|
| • Social Media Addiction | Feeling the need to repeatedly open platforms like Instagram, WhatsApp, or X. |
| • Gaming Addiction | Spending a lot of time thinking about or playing games, even when it interferes with daily responsibilities. |
| • Information Overload | Constant searching, surfing, or consuming data. |
| • Online Shopping/Spending | Getting stuck in a cycle of browsing and buying from e-commerce platforms. |
| • Pornography Addiction | Excessive viewing of adult content interfering with life roles. |

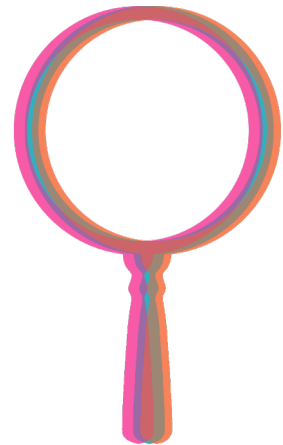

Psychological & Physical Effects

- Anxiety, depression, loneliness.
- Sleep disturbances or fatigue.
- Poor academic or work performance.
- Eye strain, headaches, neck/back pain.
- Decreased real-life social engagement.
- Reduced attention span and memory.

Self-Check: Quick Reflection

- Do I often lose track of time online?
- Have I skipped meals, sleep, or plans due to the internet?
- Do I use the internet to escape difficult feelings?
- Have others expressed concern about my screen use?
- Am I hiding or minimizing how much time I spend online?

If you answered “yes” to multiple questions, consider exploring your relationship with digital technology more deeply.
